

Bring GOOD ENOUGH MOMS™ to your workplace for your special event!

Marti and Erin Erickson, mother- daughter co-hosts of GOOD ENOUGH MOMS™, invite you to explore with them the many facets of motherhood in today's world – from confronting the daily joys and struggles of helping kids grow up well, to balancing work and family, to considering the big questions of how society views and values mothers and mothering.

Whether you're a new mom, an old mom, or just thinking about becoming a mom, they want to hear your thoughts and stories. And, mother or not, if you care about the place of mothers in family, community and the world-at-large, they invite you to join the conversation.

Maternal-Child Health specialist
Erin Erickson, former writer for Humanities Magazine at the National Endowment for Humanities in Washington, DC.

Developmental psychologist
Marti Erickson, regular contributor to KARE-TV's Today and Sunrise Shows.

Marti and Erin can...

- Support worksite parenting groups with education and information to parents of children of all ages;
- Offer practical ideas for managing the often competing demands of work and family;
- Affirm working parents in their multiple roles of parent, caregiver, and employee.

To find out more about bringing GEMs to your workplace for an event, please contact Beth Quist at bquist@wfrc.us or call 651-293-5330.

Brought to you through a partnership with

